Petit Salomon

Año: 2020

Origin: Honduras

First Third:

Upon lighting, the initial flavor is earthy, with rich tobacco at the forefront. A creamy, almost buttery texture follows, leading into a surprising blue cheese note—sharp and tangy, it provides an unexpected contrast to the earthy base. Wood flavors, likely oak or cedar, add depth, while leather rounds out the profile with a refined smoothness. The finish here is clean, with a lingering, slightly salty character from the blue cheese note.

Second Third:

As the cigar progresses, the sharpness of the blue cheese becomes more integrated, balancing nicely with the earthier flavors. Subtle chocolate undertones emerge, offering a touch of sweetness that softens the tangy cheese. The tobacco becomes more pronounced, and a slight pepper kick on the retro hale introduces a satisfying warmth. The creamy texture continues, adding a rich, luxurious mouthfeel.

Final Third:

The blue cheese flavor recedes a bit in favor of a more aged tobacco profile, but its influence remains, contributing a tangy richness to the smoke. Cocoa notes emerge, adding a bittersweet edge that complements the remaining leather and wood tones. The cigar becomes more robust, with a satisfying balance between creamy and savory flavors. The retro hale brings an earthy, slightly peppery finish.

Formats:

Size:

47f x 5.5”

First Third:

The cigar opens with a medium-to-full-bodied profile, dominated by earthy notes of cedar and rich soil. A mild sweetness from vanilla and creamy cocoa adds depth, balancing the woody core. Hints of honeycomb and honey introduce a smooth, sugary undertone that complements the earthy foundation, while the flavor remains grounded with subtle richness.

Second Third:

As the cigar progresses, it transitions into a more complex profile. Roasted coffee flavors emerge, intensifying the richness. The wood notes become sharper, while leather begins to surface, adding a distinct, savory element. A slight fruitiness starts to develop, offering a delicate counterpoint to the earthy and roasted coffee tones. The honey sweetness lingers in the background, adding a touch of smoothness to the overall experience.

Final Third:

The cigar reaches its peak in the final third, where the leather and wood notes continue to evolve, becoming more defined. Fruity flavors sharpen and meld with a light floral note, creating a balanced contrast. A sweet caramel undertone appears, adding a layer of complexity. The finish is full, with roasted coffee and woody notes dominating, leaving a rich, satisfying conclusion to the experience.

Fat Boy

Año: 2020

Strength - Medium+

Origin: Jamastran, Honduras

Wrapper: Sun Grown Habano

First Third

The first puff introduces a solid oak flavor, immediately grounding the profile with its woody depth. A layer of toasted oak develops alongside, adding richness and complexity. As the smoke settles, a slight chocolate sweetness begins to emerge, offering a smooth, semi-sweet counterpoint to the woodiness. The presence of caramel balances the initial flavors with a subtle sweetness. A slight pepper kick on the retro hale adds a touch of heat, lifting the profile without overwhelming it.

Second Third

The cigar deepens in flavor, revealing hints of leather and vintage shoe polish, which contribute to an aged, refined character. These flavors are complemented by a prominent tobacco core, with earthy and rich notes that reinforce the robust, full-bodied nature of the smoke. As the cigar continues, there's an increasing intensity, showcasing the complexity of the blend.

Final Third

The strength builds in the final third, with the emergence of aged tobacco providing a smooth, velvety texture. The profile becomes richer, with the cocoa notes coming to the forefront, offering a bittersweet, slightly bitter finish. The leather and wood remain prominent, while the pepper becomes more integrated, offering a subtle but persistent heat that complements the other flavors.
